

book of the week

Fellowship Point
Alice Elliott Dark
NOVEL

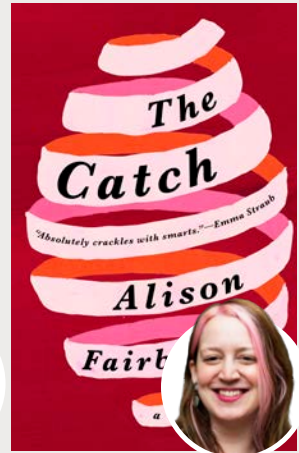

This classic novel of character explores the lifelong friendship between two eightysomething Philadelphia women who co-own a chunk of land in Maine. When writer Agnes finds she's blocked, when devoted wife Polly is widowed, when their land is threatened by development and old secrets emerge, the bedrock of their connection shifts in unimaginable ways. Engrossing and studded with wisdom about long-held bonds.

The Best New Books
Spiritual sisterhood in Maine, aspiration and envy in Houston, and a father's complicated legacy
Edited by KIM HUBBARD

A Gracious Neighbor
Chris Cander
NOVEL

Martha feels isolated in her Houston suburb. But when her popular ex-classmate Minnie moves in next door, Martha eagerly—then obsessively—pursues a friendship. A suspenseful tale of relationships, loneliness and what goes on behind closed doors.

The Catch
Alison Fairbrother
NOVEL

When Eleanor's adored dad leaves a bizarre bequest, her grief is derailed by bewilderment. Her quest to understand unfolds against the backdrop of a high-pressure job among the millennials of Washington, D.C. An affecting, often funny debut by E.L. Doctorow's granddaughter.

Star Picks: The Last Book I Loved

Jake Gyllenhaal
Why Fish Don't Exist
by Lulu Miller

"I love the way her mind works. It's just a really different way of talking about healing. It's very beautiful."

Courtney B. Vance
Leave the Gun, Take the Cannoli
by Mark Seal

"It's about making The Godfather. I'm a huge fan, but I had no idea of the drama behind it. Everyone said it would be a terrible movie!"

Natasha Lyonne
Rabbits
by Terry Miles

"It's a lot of, like, quantum computers, and there's this game happening.... I read it in Mexico in a day and a half. It's a wild ride."

